Objective:

My goal is to not only present Common Core aligned lessons in a virtual classroom, but to provide an avenue of hope for at risk or disengaged youth. As an online educator since 2011, I hope to inspire students of all ages and grade levels to reach their ultimate potential. I can also help enlighten students on business and communication, which can help any learner truly understand how important appropriate communication skills are to advancing a career or an idea within a company. I have changed career paths from the medical field to education in pursuit of a deep desire of mine to help future generations overcome the challenges and obstacles of higher education.

- Applied Project Action Research Paper, Master's Thesis: Attending a single-gendered school can affect the overall writing voices of the authors, helping them to relate to same-gendered characters in literature, television and movies, making them stronger, more empathetic authors and readers
- Doctoral candidate, working dissertation: Creating differentiated and scaffolded learning for targeted student learning objectives, and the affects of certain behavior modification techniques in controlling and creating a classroom environment in the virtual world; creating a teacher training involving and using the MTSS model to reach disengaged and "at hope" youth
