Objective:

My goal is to not only present Common Core aligned lessons in a virtual classroom, but to provide an avenue of hope for at risk or disengaged youth. As an online educator since 2011, I hope to inspire students of all ages and grade levels to reach their ultimate potential. I can also help enlighten students on business and communication, which can help any learner truly understand how important appropriate communication skills are to advancing a career or an idea within a company. I have changed career paths from the medical field to education in pursuit of a deep desire of mine to help future generations overcome the challenges and obstacles of higher education.

- Applied Project Action Research Paper, Master's Thesis: Attending a single-gendered school can affect the overall writing voices of the authors, helping them to relate to same-gendered characters in literature, television and movies, making them stronger, more empathetic authors and readers
- Doctoral candidate, working dissertation: Creating differentiated and scaffolded learning for targeted student learning objectives, and the affects of certain behavior modification techniques in controlling and creating a classroom environment in the virtual world; creating a teacher training involving and using the MTSS model to reach disengaged and "at hope" youth

RELEVANT EXPERIENCE

San Joaquin Valley College

Online Adjunct Faculty | Visalia, CA | 2015 - present

Teach online 5-week courses in the General Education department, providing instruction in introductory Sociology and Psychology. Utilize the D2L platform to provide engaging original content complementing SJVC approved curriculum, meeting grading and discussion post deadlines. Proactively contact students at risk of dropping below 70% or not meeting attendance requirements, in cooperation with faculty supervisor(s) and campus staff and administrators. Meet or exceed minimum faculty expectations and attend faculty tele-conferences and engage in professional development opportunities regularly.

Ashford University

Online Adjunct Faculty | Clinton, IA | 2010 – present

Teach 5-week online Psychology, Philosophy and Education courses designed for new and returning online learners, providing nontraditional students with written feedback and guidance, orienting students to the online environment and available academic and personal resources, and encouraging learner retention by following up with students who are struggling or who are at risk of dropping the course. Deliver feedback and encouragement to online learners using the eCollege and Waypoint systems and respond to discussion forum postings and emails within 24 hours, if not sooner.

Portland Community College

Adjunct Faculty | Portland, OR | 2010 – 2014

Teach 3-week and 10-week face-to-face and hybrid courses in the College Guidance department, focusing on non-traditional returning students.
